THINGS THEATRICAL.

The advance sale of seats and boxes for the engagement of Stuart Robson and his all-star cast, which is to present Augustus Thomas' comedy, "The Meddler," next week at the Columbia Theater, opened most auspiciously this morning, and indications are that the interest which has been aroused will be sufficiently strong to attract a succession of brilliant audiences to Lockett and Dwyer's popular playhouse. Mr. Thomas has acquired a name and reputation as an author second to that of no other native dramatic writer and in "The Meddler" he is said to have furnished his star with a part and a comedy which will go down in theatrical history as a worthy successor to that of Bertie the Lamb in "The Henrietta."

Stuart Robson's personal following is large enough to guarantee a lucrative engagement whenever and wherever he is announced, but that he does not rely on his past popularity and present standing to attract is evidenced in the names of the people he has called to his support—names, by the way, which certainly carry weight for positive worth. They are, Theodore Rubowick, Theodore Hamilton, Harold Russell, George Paunefort, J. Goodman Braye, Jr., S. S. Whitbeck, Mrs. Stuart Robson, Marie Granger, Gertrude Perry and Marie Burroughs.

The brief season of grand opera which is promised to begin on Monday at the Lafayette Square will, without doubt, arouse the interest of local musicians. The name of Clementine De Vere is assurance that the presentations will be first class, for few artists of today have greater reputations. And aside from De Vere there are others of great value. The dramatic soprano of the organization, Mme. Selma Kronold, has won first honors in Germany, and there are any number of other prominent stars, both Italian and Americans, in the casts.

The orchestra and chorus are said to be first class and are led by one of the finest conductors in America, Signor Romualdo Sapio. The stage setting for all the operas is as elaborate as the talents above mentioned deserve, the scenery used being new and complete.

The repertoire to be given consists of eight operas, "Carmen" and "Roméo and Juliet" in English; "Faust," "Il Trovatore," "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Pagliacci," "Lucia di Lammermoor" and "La Bohème" in Italian.

Paul Potter's successful offering, "The Conquerors," done by what is promised to be the best organization the Empire Theater has ever exploited, will be next week's attraction at the National Theater. The piece is said to be one of extreme strength and beauty, besides which it possesses a distinctly sensational element that would have alone sufficed to crowd a playhouse in New York. Among the names of people included in the combination to be seen here are William Faversham, E. Y. Buckus, J. H. Beutime, Joseph Wheelock, Jr., John R. Sumner, G. H. Howard, Guy Standing, W. H. Crompton, Jessie Millward, Eleanor Marshall, Busby, May Robson and Clara Bloodgood.

The Grand Opera House will be responsible next Monday night with Davis and Keogh's spectacular melodrama, "Lost in Siberia." The piece is said to be an unusually clever specimen of Russian play and holds the interest from "begin to end." The presenting company is mentioned as being a clever one and includes Duncan Preston, M. J. Jordan, John Martin, Scott Marble, William Mitchell, Lloyd Bingham, Robert McNaule, Thomas Garrick, Helena Collier, Frances Ring, Cella Alsberg and Miss Weffing.

One of the successes of last season, when "London Sleeps" will be next week's bill at the Academy of Music, where a company of some merit will produce the piece. The same scenery and effects that made the presentation notable last year will be utilized in the coming engagement, and many of the leading people have been retained. The result should be a performance of unusual merit and big houses will probably be the rule during the term.

John G. Jermon is well known in connection with the Lyceum Theater, Philadelphia, which, in spite of repeated opposition, has been the home of burlesque there for a number of years. Besides that house he managed the Standard Theater, on South Street, and has been identified with quite a number of local amusement enterprises. It is said that Mr. Jermon had watched for an opportunity to use the well-known title of "Black Crook" for a number of years. The name, it may be remembered, had been copyrighted, and the copyright renewed, but the moment that form expired he launched the "Black Crook" Burlesque Company, which has been one of his greatest successes. No other designation, perhaps, was so well known at the time the venture was started, and years before his opportunity came Mr. Jermon had laid all plans for the organization. The result was one of the best burlesque shows put out—a show that at once took rank with older organizations. Mr. Jermon's experience at Philadelphia enabled him to gather together the best people, and to secure the freshest features. The entertainment promised by this company next week at Kerman's is said to be calculated to eclipse all former efforts.

A vaudeville bill of some excellence is promised for next week at the Bijou, where Manager Grieves has been spending the last few days in filling out his roster of specialists. The entertainments of the past three weeks at the house have been of such cleverness that an unusual effort has been made, in order to prevent one program from seeming poor in comparison with that which preceded it, and still the standard has been well kept up. The coming attractions are promised to be the best yet, and should draw accordingly.
